Alaska Lumber Revives Town

The town of Hadley, located a few miles north of Ketchikan and which was a one time bustling smelter town, is fast coming into prominence again, but this time as a mill port.

Foss Brothers, representing in part San Francisco capital, have taken over the property and have installed machinery of the latest type for turning out all kinds of finished lumber. The present output is being warehoused until a supply sufficient for a ship's cargo is secured, when a ship will be sent direct to Hadley from San Francisco to load.

Extensions have been made and almost all the old wharf built over to accommodate large steamers.

The building up of the almost deserted town, together with repairing its light and water plant has meant the expenditure of considerable money. The flume from the dam above the city has been repaired and water turned into the big tank once used by the smelter people. Pipes are now being laid from the tank to the mill, where a power house is being built to accommodate a pelton wheel which will operate a dynamo furnishing light and power at the mill as well as residences.

The shipment of whole cargoes of lumber direct to the States is a new venture which will undoubtedly prove a success as Alaska woods are in great demand on account of their excellent finishing qualities. —Ketchikan, Daily Miner.

Assays running as high as $45,000 to the ton, and clean-ups of 145 ounces in twelve hours run by a two stamp mill, is in brief the latest report of the Engineer mine, Atlin.

Delhi Locates Rock

Capt. McCarthy, of the Delhi, made soundings at Gambier Bay while the freighter was in port recently, and reports four and one half fathoms of water at a nine foot tide, covering the rock.

When Capt. McCarthy docked the Delhi at the cannery wharf he asked the wharfman, "Where is that rock that the State struck?" The wharfman told the horrified captain that his ship had crossed squarely over the course taken by the State on her fatal trip. It is needless to say that Capt. McCarthy took another course when leaving port.

The White Pass company has cut the passenger rate between Whitehorse and Fairbanks to $65 down the river and $60 coming up.

It is said the Canadian government is considering the advisability of erecting an ore testing mill near Dawson to try out some quartz lodes of Whose axe are you grinding, Wrangell or some other town?

Cuts Rates To "Old Country"

The Norwegian steamer Karen cut the rates between Wrangell and Petersburg, so a great many members of the Arctic Brotherhood Camp of Wrangell and friends took advantage of the low rates and attended the dance given by the Petersburg Camp, Saturday evening.

The party reached Petersburg about 6 o'clock and were met at the dock by the Petersburg Brass Band and the townspeople who presented the visitors with a large key to the "Welcome and Hospitality" of the city.

The music rendered at the dance was exceptionally fine. The hall was filled to its utmost capacity and every one had a fine time throughout the whole evening.

Lunch was served at midnight and the dance continued till the wee sma' hours of the morning.

The party left Petersburg about ten o'clock, Sunday morning tired but with a happy smile on each face.

Boundary Survey- ers Killed

E. R. Roberts and H. Bode, members of the Canadian survey party which has been engaged in the boundary survey on the West Coast, are reported to have been killed by a landslide which carried away their camp at Cape Muzon, Dall Island.

The news was reported by a prospector who had been at the scene of the landslide. The camp

Played With Loaded Gun

Robert Smith, native boy of Klawock, was accidentally shot in the knee by a play mate, last Sunday. The lad did not know he was wounded till he saw blood on his trousers and then he rowed his companion a distance of a half mile or so before he received any attention. He was brought to Wrangell on the Uncle Dan.

Eastern Man For Nome Nugget

Richard Hatton of Washington D. C. is enroute to Nome where he will assume the editorial duties of the Nome Nugget. He served his apprenticeship under his father who was famous in his day as editor of the Burlington Hawkeye and later of the Washington Post.

He said in an interview in Seattle, "I am casting my fortune in Alaska because I believe implicitly in the future of the territory." It is men of just such conviction who are making Alaska and bringing it to its proper relations with the States.

Capt. Cann Cleared

Official approval of the report made to Washington, D. C., last week by inspectors Whitney and Turner into the wreck of the steamer State of California, was received this week from the department of commerce. It indicates that the action taken in exonerating Capt. T. H. Cann, Jr. from any blame in connection with the wreck was endorsed by the department.

Charting of the Alaska waters along the inland passage by the coast and geodetic survey, in order to include any rocks which may exist unmarked on present charts, will probably be sought by the department as the immediate result of the investigation.

Because of the lack of rain, for the first time in history the small grain crops of the Tanana valley are almost a failure this year.

Chas. Nye has closed his wood yard at Skagway, but hopes to open up again when times improve.

Alaska Coal Tested

Lieut. Commander Boyd, United States Navy, who had charge of the Alaska coal test reports that the tests have been completed but no official conclusion has been reached. He says that "no snap judgement should be taken," and warned people to pay no attention to unofficial reports that might be in circulation before the official announcement, as any such will be premature. —Ex.

Commits Suicide

Gee Gong, Chinese laborer employed at the A. P. A. cannery, committed suicide Tuesday night in a temporary fit of insanity.

Capt. Frank H. Lord, who is operating a hydraulic proposition on Ruby creek in the Atlin country, reports a good clean-up and plenty of water.

Engineer Blamed For Total Wreck

The marine inspectors rendering a decision on the wrecking of the Curocoa on an uncharted rock on the west coast of Prince of Wales Island, suspended Captain Wm. Thompson for three months and Chief Engineer Lux for six weeks completely buried and no sign of the two men found. It is believed that they are buried beneath the many tons of earth and rock that came down the mountain side.

On hearing of the disaster at Sulzer, a launch was sent to the scene. The Dominion authorities at Ottawa have been notified of the fatality.

Lynch Wins Match

A large crowd of wrestling enthusiasts attended the match between Ed Lynch and Dave Graham at the Rink last Friday evening.

Being of the same weight and build and having the reputation of being the two best wrestlers at Chemapa, Oregon, the people were guaranteed their money's worth.

On introducing them the management announced that the boys were open to a challenge from anyone whereupon Ben Gagliuten announced that he challenged the winner.

At the call of time the boys met and sparred for their holds, Lynch soon going to the mat with Graham as the aggressor for the greater part of 28 minutes when Lynch pinned Graham's shoulders to the mat. The second fall was made in three minutes with a sort of head lock.

What we know of wrestling went stick many lines but we know that it was the best match ever seen in these parts.

Satanic Apologies

Did you ever notice, in photographs of large crowds, the poor fellow in the lower right hand corner of the picture with a face on him like small rubber heads sold on the street, when pulled to its horrible limit? That might be the picture of our office force Wednesday morning on learning that our reporter who going to Ketchikan with the expectation of returning on the Seattle, had failed to make connections as planned and had left His Satanic Majesty without any copy.

As our chief copy slasher was being tied in a knot that no man should "put asunder," our maker of rhymes "cooling" off from a tussle with John Barleycorn, and a third in Ketchikan, it was to the "Devil" himself to get enough dope for the readers. So with the piercing eye of a gumshoe detective he sallied forth with pad and pencil to find the "dope."

The die is cast; we have crossed our Rubicon and can only offer our readers our humble apology for presuming to be that which we cannot even hope it is.

PRINTERS DEVIL.

"Alaska is the land for the young man. All that he has to do is to go there and stick, for my mind it holds a greater future for the young American than any other part of the country," said P. J. Kennedy, a prominent business man of the city of San Francisco.

Describes Alaska In Sermon

"Alaska the Wonderland" was subject of a recent address at the University Presbyterian Church of Seattle. Rev. Norman B. Harrison, who formerly was in Alaskan work told his pastorate of the wonders of Alaska's possessions—her rugged beauties, her marvelous resources and her roving men after an extended tour this summer.

"Seattle has a right to be interested in Alaska," he said. "For Alaska has been the making of Seattle. I might say that Seattle's shipping interests with Alaska are Seattle's largest interests. What was once termed as 'Seward's Folly,' is now found to be a veritable treasure land and beauty. 'Civilization has been moving westward from the time that Abraham made his journey into the promised land; until now the United States is in possession of the last country to the westward. And truly it is a promised land.'"

Dr. Harrison told his large audience of the great strides which have been made in the North in recent years. He pointed to the fact that Juneau, with the Treadwell mines close at hand, has doubled its population in a year, that the annual gold output is $2,000,000, that the salmon industry amounts to $8,000,000 annually, and that the total out put in all industries is $25,000,000. He told of the great agricultural possibilities—the fruits and flowers and berries, the wealth of which men are just beginning to realize.

Lastly he told of Alaska's men, her white men and natives.

"The men of Alaska are needy," he concluded, "because they are isolated, because they tend to scatter into isolated places where they are hard to reach. They are needy for books and teachers and for Gods word, rather than for the ship loads of liquor which leave for the North

Alaska Sealskins Go To St. Louis

As a result of a recent contract with Alaskan sealers this years catch of sealskins amounting to the value of $1,000,000 were shipped to St. Louis. For the past 40 years this catch has gone to London.

New Gold Strike

The stampede is on for fair, and "to go or not to go" is the question. Many will go and some will stay behind; money will be spent and history written—and the game will go on as it always has.

You can hear almost any kind of a story around town today regarding the new camp, but it is difficult to verify any story you hear. Yesterday and Sunday you could hear anywhere about town that the News-Miner had received a story of marvelous finds at the new diggings and was holding them out on the public. As we are in the business of hunting big stories and publishing them as soon as we receive them, such talk sounded foolish, but there was plenty of it. We have never received a telegram regarding the strike that we have not made public and never will.

It is impossible for us to advise people regarding the new camp, for we know nothing of it except what we have published. We refuse to knock any discovery, for you never can tell what a new camp may be. We can not boost a stampede, lest we be wrong and do incalculable damage to the hard-working miners, who should not be sent off on a false stampede. We are spending some money and doing all we can to get the true story of the new camp, but except what we have published and you are as able to figure the situation out from our published reports as we are, and it seems to us that the prospector is warranted in taking a chance there—still we are not able to advise miners to go there. —Fairbanks News-Miner.

Held For Assault And Attempt To Kill

G. Moreno, Mexican cannery hand employed at Craig was arrested and brought to Wrangell for attempting to kill a fellow employee.

While in a drunken brawl Moreno drew a knife and used it to such effect that the injured man is not expected to live. Eight or ten men men rushed Moreno and disarmed him before he could do further injury.

But meager reports of the affair can be obtained. As we go to press to early to give an account of the case a more detailed account will be given later.

The alleged gold strike in Shushana district is certainly a puzzler. Entirely reputable men, who have come out thoroughly disgusted at the prospects, and have no hesitation in proclaiming the alleged strike a fake of the rankest kind. On the other hand, equally reliable, but probably more optimistic fellows who have gone there write that that the camp is one of great promise. So there you are.

HORSE HAS LONG FAST

How long will a horse live without food and water? That is the question that is being discussed in Caribou. It seems that a horse disappeared from Caribou 21 days ago and has just been discovered in a roof house into which it had fallen and had remained all this time without food or water. The animal looked like a Battle Creek breakfast food demonstrator when they took it out and was thinner than the cartoon of a militant suffragette.

Ed Armstrong Dead

Edward Armstrong, commonly known as Casey Armstrong died at Juneau last week of paresis. For several years Armstrong had been suffering from locomotor ataxia.

Casey Armstrong was 38 years of age and was born in Telegraph. His father was a whiteman and his mother a full-blooded native woman. Armstrong followed mining and prospecting for many years and has lived at Juneau the greater part of his life.

During the Cleveland administration he served as deputy under Marshall Williams. He has, for the last two or three years, been serving as native interpreter for court terms at Juneau.

After visiting there awhile they will continue on their way to Mr. Hull's old home in Iowa. They will return to Bellingham, by way of the Southern route where they will make their home.

Their many friends wish them wish them well on their long journey.

Moving Pictures Of Northern Lights

A recent Swedish expedition to study the aurora in northern latitudes has succeeded in obtaining three satisfactory moving pictures of this elusive celestial phenomenon. The kinematograph was first tried in 1910 on the aurora, but no satisfactory results were obtained until this year.

John Zug, who recently walked to Iditarod from Dikeman, says that he never saw the mosquitoes so thick in the north. He could hear them ahead of him, and the noise, he says, was like a gale of wind through telegraph wires while around him and in front of him they were so thick he could hardly see his way.

"Big Tim" Sullivan Killed By Train

The missing Timothy D. Sullivan member of Congress from the Thirteenth New York District, prominent member of Tammany, and Senior member of the theatrical firm of Sullivan and Considine, was found dead a few hours after eluding his nurses at the private sanitarium where he had been confined his nurses at Pelham Parkway. The body which had lain in the morgue for thirteen days was identified by his brother Larry Mulligan.

Notice To Mariners

Mariners observing anything wrong with the aids to navigation in navigable waters are requested to inform the inspectors by letter or telegraph. A telegram marked "Paid government rate, charge Bureau of Lighthouses, Washington, D. C." to the Light house Inspector, Portland, Ore. does not require its prepayment by the sender.

Official notices of interest to local mariners have been issued by the light house service as follows:
Resurrection bay—Caines Head light, established August 30, 1913 on Caines head; a flashing white acetylene light showing a flash every three seconds.

Pilot Rock Light, established August 29, 1913, on Pilot Rock; a flashing white light acetylene showing every six seconds.

Wrangell Strait—Petersburg Float Light "24" reported out of position September 5, 1913, was replaced on the same date.

Belated Shipments Rushed North

The last down river freight was supposed to have been shipped north on the Spokane, but a few belated shipments reached Seattle in time to catch the Northwestern which was rushed north in a race against the winter ice in the Yukon. White Pass officials think it just possible that the freight will make the last boat from White Horse.

Brings New Editor

Paul Stanhope, our genial chief, is returning on the Jefferson from Bellingham where he took unto himself a wife. Miss Doris Radenbaugh, a popular young woman of Ketchikan is the happy bride. Congratulations, a lot of old shoes and rice are in order when the bridal pair step of the boat.

Skagway business men are organizing for the purpose of trying to swing more of the Sushana travel through that city. They think White Pass offers the best route to the new diggings, and they will consider the best means of making them known to the world.

George Hinton, publisher of the Tanana News at Tanana, was arrested recently for criminal libel. His accuser is Edith Coffey, wife of John Coffey, the Hot Spring commissioner.
